INTRODUCTION

Concordia University is one of the ten largest universities in Canada. Founded in 1974 by the merger of Sir George Williams University and Loyola College of Montreal, it enrolls approximately 25,000 students (including 3,000 graduate students) on two distinctive Montreal campuses. The university offers - under the supervision of an academic staff that includes more than 700 full-time faculty members and more than 800 part-time - a broad range of both traditional and innovative undergraduate and graduate degree programmes in four faculties - Arts and Science, Commerce and Administration, Engineering and Computer Science and Fine Arts.

Despite the absence until recently of any institutional coordination in the area of international relations, Concordia has gradually evolved a distinctive international profile through the extensive academic links that have developed between its faculty members and numerous foreign institutions. At the present time, Concordia University enjoys formal academic relations with fifteen sister institutions in seven countries; it enrolls more than seven hundred international students in its degree programs and is accommodating many visiting scholars from abroad in its research facilities; its professors are actively engaged in collaborative research and other academic exchange activities in more than one hundred countries around the world.

In recognition of the increasing importance of international academic relations for Canadian universities today and in response to the increasing tempo of international activity on campus, Concordia University has recently established a Council for International Cooperation. The Council is mandated to monitor, facilitate and coordinate Concordia's international academic relations and to advise on their further development. In addition to its major role in providing a cross-faculty forum for the exchange of information and opinions on the university's international relations, and developing appropriate policy alternatives, the Council also deals with the day-to-day activities which are being generated by the growing level of international activity at Concordia. To this end, the Council is being supported by an Office of International Cooperation which acts as the secretariat and administrative arm of the Council. During the 1987/88 academic year the Council is being administered by a full-time Director and governed by a Steering Committee that is chaired by the Vice-Rector Academic.

A core responsibility of the Council during its initial year of operation is to gauge the level of international academic exchange activity that is already underway on campus. In particular, the Council is mandated to conduct a survey of the international academic exchange activities of Concordia University professors. It was envisaged that such a survey would enable Concordia University to speak with greater authority - to both internal and external communities - about the extent and types of international activities that are already underway; that it would enable the Council to build on existing faculty strengths and interests in elaborating alternatives and identifying priorities for future development; and that it would enable the university to more efficiently and effectively make representations to external granting agencies interested in international academic exchange activities.

It was in September 1987 that the Council prepared for distribution a "Survey of the International Activities of Concordia University Professors." Vice-Rector Academic F.R. Whyte, in a letter of September 21 which accompanied each survey form (see Appendix 1.1), emphasized that "the information gathered through this survey will be the cornerstone of the Council's work and essential as a first step in identifying the longer-term implications of international activities for Concordia." The survey asked respondents to identify those countries outside of North America which they had visited for academic purposes during the past five years and to indicate the types of academic exchange activities in which they had been engaged; it also asked respondents to identify other international academic interests which they felt were relevant to Concordia's international activities; and it indicated that faculty members could expect to be "contacted on an individual basis in order to obtain more detailed information on their specific international activities." The survey was distributed to 795 full-time faculty members, professional librarians and academic administrators (see Appendices 1.2 and 1.3.1) and was completed by 754 individuals, providing a response rate of 94.7%.

SUMMARY OF FINDINGS

The significant response to the survey has provided a wealth of information about the international academic exchange activities presently underway at Concordia University. The data is summarized below and presented in greater detail in a series of appendices - including tables of statistical summaries, charts with greater depth of analysis and graphics to make critical points as clear as possible - which are referred to in the text.

Concordia University and the World (Appendix II): The survey reveals that Concordia University professors have been far more active than had been generally realized in international academic exchange activities. A substantial majority (68.3%) have traveled outside North America for academic purposes during the past five years (see Appendix 1.3.2). These professors have visited 118 countries in all parts of the world (see Appendices 2.1 and 2.8.1)), with the largest concentrations of activity occurring in Europe (61.9%) and Asia (21.4%) and relatively lower but significant levels of activity occurring in Latin America (8.9%), Africa (4.7%) and Oceania (3.2%). The ten countries outside of North America in which Concordia professors have been most active academically are - in descending rank order - the United Kingdom, France, Germany (both the Federal Republic and the Democratic Republic), Italy, China, the Netherlands, India, Japan, Switzerland and Greece (see Appendix 2.2).

The academic exchange activities of Concordia professors fall into four broad categories (see Appendices 2.1 and 2.8.2). Overall, the largest number travel abroad for research purposes (33%) or to attend scholarly conferences (32.9%). A significant number engage in what we have described as "academic tourism" - familiarization visits to academic institutions abroad to learn about the degree programs and research orientations of relevant institutions. A proportionally smaller (9.8%) number (254) have taught courses or lectured abroad during the past five years.

Of course, academic exchange activities of Concordia professors vary significantly from one region of the world to another. In Africa (see Appendices 2.3 and 2.8.3) Concordia University professors have been active in twenty-eight countries, with a heavy concentration on research (47.3%) and less emphasis on academic tourism (25%), on participation in scholarly conferences (17%) and on teaching (10.7%). In Asia (see Appendices 2.4 and 2.8.4) Concordia University professors have been active in twenty-nine countries, with nearly equal concentration on participation in scholarly conferences (30.4%), academic tourism (28.5%) and research (28.3%) and less emphasis on teaching (12.8%). In Europe (see Appendices 2.5 and 2.8.5) Concordia University professors have been active in twenty-six countries, with approximately equal concentration on participation in scholarly conferences (35.6%) and on research (33.3%) and relatively less concentration on academic tourism (22.6%) and on teaching (8.5%). In Latin America (see Appendices 2.6 and 2.8.6) the exchange activities of Concordia University professors have concentrated on research (37.9%), with relatively less emphasis on participation in scholarly conferences (27.1%), on academic tourism (25.6%) and on teaching (9.4%). Finally, in Oceania (see Appendices 2.7 and 2.8.7) Concordia University professors have been active in five countries, with greatest emphasis on participation in scholarly conferences (34.1%), somewhat less emphasis on research (28%) and on academic tourism (24.4%) and less emphasis on teaching (13.4%).

International Profile of the Faculty of Arts and Science (Appendix III): The Faculty of Arts and Science is by far the largest faculty of Concordia University and is responsible for 58% of our respondents. Professors in the Faculty of Arts and Science are active in ninety-nine countries around the world (see Appendices 3.1 and 3.3.1), with the largest concentration in Europe (62.6%) and lesser concentrations in Asia (20.2%), Latin America (8.7%), Africa (5%) and Oceania (3.5%). Their academic exchange activities (see Appendices 3.1 and 3.3.2) emphasize research (33.2%) and participation in scholarly conferences (32.8%), with a smaller number engaged in academic tourism (24.6%) and in teaching (9.4%). [See Appendix 3.2 for details]

International Profile of the Faculty of Commerce and Administration (Appendix IV): Professors in the Faculty of Commerce and Administration have been active in fifty-nine countries around the world (see Appendices 4.1 and 4.3.1), with the largest concentrations in Europe (54.2%) and Asia (28.5%), and lesser concentrations in Latin America (12.6%), Oceania (2.8%) and Africa (1.9%). Their academic exchange activities (see Appendices 4.1 and 4.3.2) emphasize participation in scholarly conferences (39.1%), with less emphasis on academic tourism (24.3%), on research (22.5%) and on teaching (14.1%). [See Appendix 4.2 for details].

International Profile of the Faculty of Engineering and Computer Science (Appendix V): Professors in the Faculty of Engineering and Computer Science have been active in fifty-one countries around the world (see Appendices 5.1 and 5.3.1), with an overwhelming concentration of activities in Europe (60.4%) and Asia (27.1%), and much less activity in Latin America (5.9%), Oceania (3.8%) and Africa (2.8%). By far the greatest concentration of international activities has been participation in scholarly conferences (47.5%), with much less emphasis on research (23.1%), academic tourism (18%) and teaching (11.4%). [See Appendix 5.2 for details]

International Profile of the Faculty of Fine Arts (Appendix VI): Professors in the Faculty of Fine Arts have been active in sixty countries around the world, with overwhelming emphasis on Europe (71.6%) and much less activity in Latin America (10.1%), Asia (8.7%), Africa (8.2%) and Oceania (1.4%). The majority of academic exchange activity abroad has focused on research (58.6%), with less concentration on academic tourism (26.6%), participation in scholarly conferences (8.9%) and teaching (5.9%). [See Appendix 6.2 for details]

International Profile of Other Respondents (Appendix VII): We have classified as "Other Respondents" the small number of professional librarians and academic administrators who responded to the survey. This small sampling has been active in twenty-two countries, particularly in Asia and Europe (see Appendix 7.1). [See Appendix 7.2 for details]

Concordia University Professors and International Scholarly Conferences (Appendix VIII): Participation in scholarly conferences has constituted nearly one third (32.9%) of all international exchange activities of Concordia University professors during the past five years. Concordia professors have participated in eight hundred and fifty-four scholarly conferences in seventy-two countries (see Appendices 8.1 and 8.3), with the largest number of conferences occurring in Europe (67.8%) and Asia (20.3%), and a much smaller number occurring in Latin America (6.4%), Oceania (3.3%) and Africa (2.2%). [See Appendix 8.2 for details]

Concordia University Professors and International Research (Appendix IX): Research has also constituted nearly one third (33%) of all the international academic exchange activities of Concordia University professors during the past five years. Concordia professors have engaged in research in one hundred and four countries around the world (see Appendices 9.1 and 9.3) with particular emphasis on Europe (63.3%) and much less emphasis on research in Asia (18.8%), Latin America (9%), Africa (6.2%) and Oceania (2.7%). [See Appendix 9.2 for details]

Concordia University Professors and Teaching Abroad (Appendix X): A small but significant proportion (9.8%) of Concordia University professors have had the opportunity to teach abroad during the past five years (see Appendices 10.1 and 10.3). Two hundred and fifty-four Concordia University professors have taught in sixty countries, with particular emphasis on teaching in Europe (54.7%) and Asia (28.7%), and much less emphasis on teaching in Latin America (7.5%), Africa (4.7%) and Oceania (4.3%). [See Appendix 10.2 for details]

Concordia University Professors and Academic Tourism (Appendix XI): A significant proportion (24.3%) of Concordia University professors have engaged in academic tourism abroad during the past five years (see Appendices 11.1 and 11.3). These activities have been concentrated in Europe (58.4%) and Asia (25.7%), with much less activity in Latin America (8.3%), Africa (4.4%) and Oceania (3.2%). [See Appendix 11.2 for details]

Language Competence of Concordia University Professors (Appendix XII): Concordia University professors indicate that, in addition to English, they are competent in a total of sixty-six languages (see Appendix 12.2). A ranking of the ten languages in which the largest number of Concordia professors are competent may be found in Appendix 12.1.

CONCLUSION

The overwhelming response of Concordia faculty members and professional librarians to the "Survey of the International Activities of Concordia University Professors" has provided a unique and encouraging snapshot of Concordia University's international activities. The variety and the extent of these activities - in one hundred and eighteen countries around the world - establishes clearly the importance of international academic relations for Concordia University today. Building on the information that is now available through this survey, it will be possible for the Council for International Cooperation to fulfill more easily its mandate to monitor, facilitate and coordinate Concordia University's international academic relations; and to project both internally and externally a more accurate international image of the institution.

APPENDIX I

SURVEY OF THE INTERNATIONAL ACTIVITIES OF CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY PROFESSORS

CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY

September 21, 1987

Dear Colleague:

I am very pleased to have this opportunity to write to you about our international academic relations.

You are probably aware of Concordia's renewed commitment to support the international academic activities of its faculty. During 1986-87, this commitment was most clearly reflected in the steps that were taken to develop our ties with the People's Republic of China, and this work is continuing.

Following the reports which I presented to Senate and the Board of Governors last Spring concerning our activities in China, I have set up a Council for International Cooperation on a provisional basis for 1987-88 and have appointed Dr. Martin Singer to act as its Director. With the assistance of advisory committees drawing on the expertise of interested faculty members, Dr. Singer and the Council will undertake a survey of international activities at Concordia, assist faculty members or units intending to undertake such activities, set up the basic documentary infrastructure necessary for their coordination and solve outstanding problems or difficulties that may be identified. The work undertaken this year will enable Concordia to take an informed decision as to the directions and structure it should give to international activities in subsequent years.

Enclosed with this letter you will find a survey document. The information gathered through this survey will be the cornerstone of the Council's work and essential as a first step in identifying the longer-term implications of international activities for Concordia. Therefore I urge you to complete this form and return it by October 15, 1987 to the Council (AD201). An envelope is provided for your convenience.

Thank you for your cooperation in this important matter.

Sincerely,

Francis R. Whyte
Vice-Rector, Academic
